THE HIGHEST FORM OF TRUTH

Mr. Israel Zangwill Says That Such is True Fiction.

CELEBRATED AUTHOR'S LECTURE

He Contends that Fiction is Truth Because It is Made Up of Atomic Parts of Science and Philosophy.

The third Richmond Lyceum course The third Richmond Lyceum course started in last night most auspiciously, with every seat in the Academy of Music occupied, and with one of the most omlinent and famous of English novelests as the attraction.

The speaker was well-known, through his works to every one in the house. His his works to every one in the house. His fame had preceded him, and the great success of his latest novel and play, "The Children of the Ghetto," had but added to the brilliancy of his reputation as a novelist, critic and playwright.

Much was expected of him. And the expectations of the andlence were more than satisfied.

Mr. Israel Zangwill is a man of medium height, with broad forchead and musical height, with broad forehead and musica height, with broad foreness and mosace-voice, and with waving hair that suggests strength of purpose and fixity of ideas. His manner is most attractive, and even with all the greatness that has been thrust upon him, because he deserved it; he is most approachable, and received me in his dressing room with the cordiality of an every day, may of an every-day man.

He has travelled extensively, and this is his first visit to Richmond. Yesterday he drove around the city, and observed many of the points of interest, and he will take a ride around again to-day before will take a ride around again to-day before leaving on the noon train for the North. Mr. Zangwill is stopping at the Jofferson Hotel, which he thinks is one of the most beautiful and complete he has ever seen. Last night after his lecture he was entertained by the Jofferson Club at their handsome club-house, where he was introduced to many prominent citizens, and enjoyed a solendid buffet lunch.

PRESENTED BY DR. CALISCH.

Mr. Zangwill's subject last night was

Mr. Zangwill's subject last night was "Fiction the Highest Form of Truth." He was introduced by Dr. E. N. Calisch in a few pleasant words, and in that delight-own.

"We are especially happy," said Dr. "We are especially happy," said Dr. Callsch, "In introducing to the members of the course so famous a man as the speaker of the evening. He is a most successful novelist and playwright, and his great play, "The Children of the Ghetto," has been pronounced by the Northern critics as classic."

disconcerted at any time during the lec

Misconcerted at any time during the lecture. His visce was soft and musical, and his delivery, with a noticeable British accent, was quite pleasant.

His purpose was to impress upon the audience the idea, as he had conceived it, that true fiction was the embodiment of truth, and that true fiction could be nothing else than truth, even though the characters portrayed in works or fiction were but creations of the mind. He contended that just as a glass of water was a fixed fact composed, as it was, of many atomic parts, so was a work of fiction the highest form of truth, composed, as it was, of atomic quantities of scientific,
mathematical and philosophical parts.
In order to create a true work of fiction
the artist must take up many ingredients,

phrases which were well put, and uphasized his contention that fiction was high form of truth when he said that

Of course there were certain blads of ction that had no more semblance to he man who in writing his book gathered ittle grains of truth as he found them in science, in astronomy, in botany, in mathematics, in everyday philosophy and in sociology, and of these grains formed one great truth that revealed itself in the completed work.

Different people see the same thing rem different standpoints, but the truth till existed even in the different shapes. It is a fact that every baby is the prettiest it is a fact that every bady is the prettiest and smartest to its own mother. That may be considered fiction by some, but it is the truth. It is not necessary for a manimous expression of opinion in any given direction to make or the thing in view a fact or a truth. If a fact exists it is a truth from the separate points of given.

Fiction is the concentration of atoulc truths and facts into one great and substantial truth. The characters pictured in faction do not represent one person, but they tepresent thousands, concentrated into one by the art of the novelist.
Richmond is the only city in this country that has been honored with a lecure by Mr. Zangwill, and from the reception here. here are hundreds of people who hope it will not be his last visit here.
